Break Free ! Engaging Critically With The Concept And Reality Of Civil Society

A Conversation with Jai Sen

Tuesday, 17th January 2017, 4 pm - 7 pm @ Environment Support Group - Workshop Space, 1575, Ring Road, Banashankari 2nd Stage, Bangalore 560070 www.esgindia.org

.....at a time when the world is dramatically changing, and when communities of the historically oppressed and structurally excluded in so many parts of the world are becoming new actors on national and the world-political stages, the beguiling power of 'civility' is – even as some sections of 'civil society' continue to make contributions to this resurgence – in fact in many ways also undermining the processes of the much deeper and wider democratisations that are opening up in our times, because of the internal, structural dynamics of civility.....

Jai Sen, associated with CACIM (the India Institute for Critical Action : Centre In Movement), is an activist/researcher/author on and in movement. He has intensively engaged with the World Social Forum and contemporary emerging movement at a world scale for the past decade and more, organising meetings, moderating the listserv WSFDiscuss, and editing / co-editing several books including World Social Forum : Challenging Empires (2004), World Social Forum : Critical Explorations (2011), and The Movements of Movements, Part 1 : What Makes Us Move ? and The Movements of Movements, Part 2 : Rethinking Our Dance (forthcoming, 2017).

Please confirm your participation at least a day in advance by emailing pushpa@esgindia.org or calling 080-26713560/26713561 or call Malleash on 9448377402. This will help organise some short eats. etc.
